

Trump Shock and the Indo-Pacific: Implications for our region

- What will U.S. leadership in the Indo-Pacific look like under the Trump Administration?
- How will the Indo-Pacific region's economic and security architecture adjust, particularly after U.S. withdrawal from the Trans-Pacific Partnership?
- How will Chinese and other policymakers likely respond to the Trump agenda on trade, alliances and regional diplomacy?

Dr Jeffrey Wilson

Dr Wilson is a Research Fellow at the Perth USAsia Centre and the Asia Research Centre at Murdoch University. He is an international political economist who specialises in economic regionalism in the Indo-Pacific. He has consulted for government and business on regional trade issues and is a frequent television and print commentator on Australia's place in the Asian region.

Professor Baogang He

Professor He is an Alfred Deakin Professor and Chair in International Relations at Deakin University in Victoria. Professor He has forged an international reputation for his depth of knowledge on China's political and economic structures and China's Asian relationships. He is a former fellow of many regional universities and has advised government and international organisations.

Professor Kanishka Jayasuriya

Professor Jayasuriya is a Professor of Politics and International Studies and a Fellow of the Asia Research Centre at Murdoch University in Perth. He has long held teaching and research appointments in Australian and international universities, focusing primarily on changing dynamics in Asian civil society, Indo-Pacific governance and regional political and economic leadership.

Date: Thursday, 23rd February 2017

Time: 5:00pm - 6:30pm

Venue: The University Club of WA Auditorium, Hackett Entrance #1, Hackett Drive, Crawley

**CLICK HERE TO RSVP**

